Do you trust UUP Dump, aka problems with print to PDF in install from UUP Dump media

Let me start by saying that I have only ever used UUP Dump twice. The most recent was to download the 24H2 Release Preview build 26100.1742.

I performed a clean install of Windows using this image and noticed immediately after setup that the print to PDF driver was missing. I went into features and found that the Print to PDF feature is actually installed. So, I tried to uninstall it and reinstall it but Windows is unable to install this feature.

Now, my questions:

1) Has anyone else tried to use the Print to PDF feature in a CLEAN INSTALL of 26100.1742?

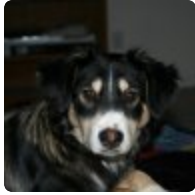

2) For those who have used UUP Dump a lot more than I have, do you ever notice any odd issues of things not working? Do you really trust UUP Dump to create a reliable image?

NOTE: If I pull down the most recent RP build from MS (26100.1502) and then upgrade it to 1742, it works just fine. This issue seems to happen only if I do a clean install of 1742.

Follow-up:

Just installed 1742 on a VM and it also fails.

Never used UUP Dump and don't plan to at this late stage of my game. I checked into it once just to try to understand it and realized for me and what I do I have no need of customized ISOs. I take the route I consider to be the safest and most straightforward and just go straight to the source when an iso is available...MS.

Now you, my friend, are into all that advanced teckie scripting stuff so it should be right up your alley.

If I'm off the rails today, come back tomorrow. I'll make more sense once my memory pill kicks in....if I remember to take it.

Curious: when I've installed using an ISO from UUPDump (always as an upgrade), the KB item has re-downloaded again from Windows Update after the upgrade. That, even though the version number after the upgrade was as expected. Seems strange, if not problematic.

Are you getting that, "hsehestedt"?

I'll admit I've downloaded several different ISOs from UUP Dump. Every single time there was some sort of issue.

Now, I cannot say if it was a bad download, problem with the image created, or just a bug in the OS. But, at my age I don't think I'll try anymore UUP Dump ISOs. I will stick to official MS downloads (Release Preview is as far back as I will go).

No, I can't say that I have noticed anything like that.

BTW, I have an update. It seems like the issue may NOT have been due to the UUP Dump image. So, I have multiple machines that I upgraded to build 1742. Print to PDF works on all of them. But I just took a machine and installed an earlier build on it and allowed Windows update to update it to 1742. Interestingly, Print to PDF does not work on that one.

I have a theory, but I'll have to test it tomorrow. I suspect that there is a problem with Print to PDF in build 1742 but ONLY if the driver has not been configured prior to upgrading to 1742. It looks like if it was setup prior to 1742, it will continue to work after upgrading to 1742.

It looks like I will need a third-party PDF printer driver.

Any suggestions?

Hello @hsehestedt ,

1. A few days before I downloaded iso of 26100.1591.240820-2119.GE_RELEASE_SVC_PROD3_CLIENTPRO_OEMRET_X64FRE_EN-US from uupdump.net I installed this os build on hdd partition.
2. Then after windows update , os build was upgraded to build 26000.1742 in that partition.
3. I run sysprep and then created captured image of build 26100.1742(install.wim)
4. I have already made bootable usb for build 26100.1591 by your script posted in thread Installation of a fresh windows 11 24h2 stop with errors post #63 by mounting the iso of 2600.1591 .Then I added install.wim (of captured build 26000.1742) to sources

5. I installed windows 11 v24H2 build 26000.1742 on another partition on hdd with sufficient free space 32 GB.(minimum)
6. I opened this thread and right click to save as pdf. I have attached screenshot and pdf file. The pdf file opens offline and online.

Is this what you have written in this thread?

Thanks.
